Our “100 Days” Plan

After reading “The First 100 Days,” brainstorm to come up with your own classroom plan.

When a new U.S. president takes office, that person makes a plan for the first 100 days of their presidency. This plan shows the president’s values and priorities.

Our school has _______ days left in this school year. Here is our plan for what we want to value and prioritize in our classroom for the next _______ days.

Vocabulary
Value: An idea we care about that guides our behavior
Priority: An activity or achievement that is more important to us than any others

Our Classroom Values
Our classroom is a ________________________________ place.

Each person in our classroom is ________________________________.

We want people to feel ________________________________ when they come here.

When we disagree, we handle it by ________________________________

______________________________________________________________________________.

Our classroom motto is ________________________________

______________________________________________________________________________.
Our Classroom Priorities

In the next ________ days, we want to accomplish the following classroom goals:

1.
2.
3.

Our Helping Priorities

In the next ________ days, we will make our school a better place by:

1.
2.
3.

In the next ________ days, we will make our community a better place by:

1.
2.
3.